To solve the problem of losing or misplacing your remotes.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

With more people “cutting the cord” and today’s technology constantly evolving, more streaming devices are coming to the market, all of which require a remote. How often do people watch TV? How many times has the remote been lost? These remotes come in all shapes and sizes, but are trending in the smaller size. This makes them easier to lose and much harder to find. The sheer quantity of remotes one has to keep track of is a burden in itself. This is also perfect for fan, air conditioner, and other household items that require remotes.

The Remote Rangler is a universal attachment that connects to any remote. It attaches multiple remotes together, along with a lanyard to keep them within arm’s reach and ALWAYS together. The attachment is designed to stretch tightly around any size remote. The lanyard provides more surface area, so that you can find your remotes easier, then simply hang them up when you’re done.

TARGET MARKET

The target market is everyone from teenagers to senior citizens. The emphasis will be on those who own a sound bar, a streaming device or both. Parents will love this, because kids have the uncanny ability to lose remotes in the strangest places. Adults with elderly parents could help them from misplacing the remotes as well. Dads are notorious for being the king of the remote and this product would be a perfect gift for the ones always complaining about losing it.

PRODUCT DEVELOPMENT AND MARKET RESEARCH

This product has been in the research and development stage for over 2 years and there is a demand. I have received valuable feedback from the market and have implemented those changes to the revised version of the final product. The Remote Rangler has 5 star ratings on both Amazon and Etsy. The main competitors of this product are the universal remote, and remote caddies. The Remote Rangler is better than the universal remote because of price point, functionality and ease of use, and better than caddies because the Rangler is portable and keeps all your remotes together at all times. This is a very innovative product and one of a kind, simple yet very effective and would be a fresh new addition to your store.
